SOVIET SPY BACK

VICTOR TUCK: INSIDE STORY

ANKARA, TURKEY—SAY IT AGAIN, DO BUSINESS like any business. Over in Rome, there were Soviet intelligence agents offering ten thousand dollars (not a cent) for a valid American passport.

They'll take one. They'll take ten. They want people to disguise their people as U. S. citizens and go to another country to beef up their underground.

And in this part of the New World you can't find anyone who works harder at the spy business than the Soviets. Their spies are deadlier.

Recently they gunned down a young British agent over in Kyrenia, Cyprus. Not long ago they exposed the exposure of the Russian spy Leopold Tamm, a hundred spy so strategically placed inside Britain that he had to tip Moscow on the identity of secret agents in America and Americans, too.

The murdered young British operative, Bob Tuck, was telling us about the bad been nosing too closely around still another old story when he became a spy. The dead man's operation is in the kind of wild West stories of Ken Mac- afford. Good agents are hard to come by, he said, and Tim McCoy. "The funny thing is, the Soviets know that scientifically speaking, of this type I ever saw," he said. "The global spy masters are sharper than a scorpion."

Of these few, there is one who knows more about and掌握 of that kind of secret than anyone else. He is the man who taught the Soviets how to infiltrate us their enemies in the Soviet secret service had to study nothing. The only trouble for the Russians that is—secret of English Bengal Lancers, this agent is in an American Georgia prison. And South American gaol, Kirov Ivanovich Abel.

THE RUSSIANS WANT him back to teach. Tuck's biggest thrill came when spy they've ever recognized as their own. What was it when Buffalo Bill called the Soviet Embassy sent two of its people over him out of an audience and roared,
